Att: AEC

Berowra is the most logical option when it comes to selecting a seat needing to be abolished. The seat is geographically too large and at the same time not growing at the rate of other electorates. The seat can easily be split, with areas going to nearby Bradfield, MacKellar, Bennelong, Parramatta, Mitchell, MacQuarie, or Greenway. If the AEC chooses to abolish one seat alone then this one would be the easiest to do, and it wouldn't at all compromise its demographics, with those areas very much able to fit in nicely with the nearby surrounding seats. It seems like many other suggestions that have been presented are in favour of this, they are from: (Michael Albert Hedger, David M, Stephen Lesslie, Ben Last, Damien Ferri, Nimalan Sivakumar, and Anonymous 1). The map presented by Anonymous1 shows how such a change could look like. Seeing as it is the seat that borders the most electorates, it also makes it easier to distribute areas to the other electorates.
